Your 2016–17 Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) was selected for review in a process called “verification.” In this process, the University of Indianapolis (UIndy) will compare information from your FAFSA with your educational records as well as the information that you are providing with this Identity and Statement of Educational Purpose form. The law says that we have the right to ask you for this information before awarding federal aid; therefore, no further action can be taken on your request for financial aid, including all federal, state, or need-based University funds, until you submit the required information and complete this process. It may also be necessary to submit additional information as requested. An official award letter will be sent once your aid eligibility can be established. Some FAFSAs are selected for verification after an award letter is sent. In these instances, verification information must still be collected and your aid eligibility reevaluated before your award status is final.

If there are differences between your FAFSA information and the verification documents, UIndy will make the necessary corrections electronically and submit them to the Federal Processing Center. You then will receive a Student Aid Report Acknowledgement from the Federal Processing Center to inform you of the corrections we made. Your financial aid awards may be adjusted because of the correction process.
