"A change of face" were the watchwords on the Indiana Central Campus this year. Not only did the physical appearance of the campus change, but also the faces around campus.

This year brought to ICU a freshman class composed of some of the most conservative students ever. This followed the general trend towards conservatism which the student body experienced under Ronald Reagan's presidency.

There was a noticeable change in the administrative staff. One very prominent "missing" face was that of President Gene Sease who left during the first semester on sabbatical.

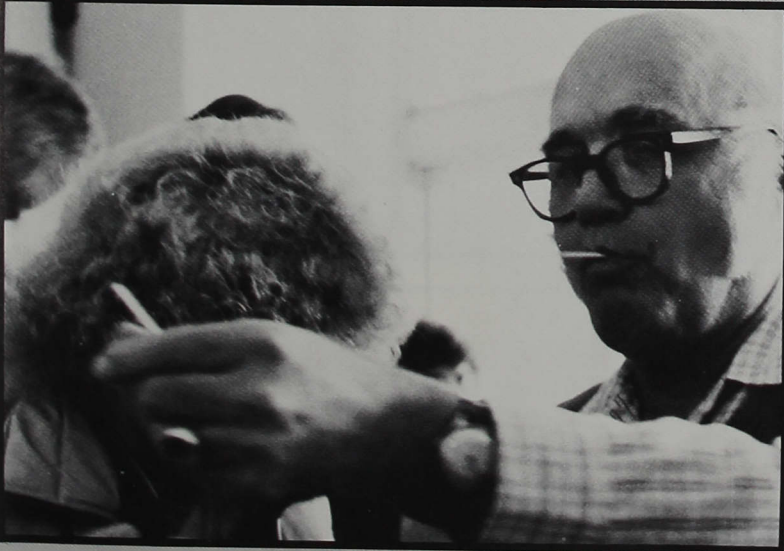

The soccer team lost a coach, Joe Tugurian, and gained a new one — Ali ElMessoussi — from the ranks of its own players. A coaching change was also experienced by the women's basketball team.

Faces Change At Indiana Central

1982-83: Year Of Change

The theme of the 1982-83 ICU school year was "change for the better". Many changes which occurred this year served to attract more attention to Indiana Central as an educational facility and also provided students with a greater range of educational opportunities.

One of the biggest changes occurred with the development of the ten million dollar Fitness For the Future campaign. This campaign will eventually provide Indiana Central with a new physical fitness facility.

Another major change was the expansion of the communications department. This was accomplished through the renovation of Buxton Hall, a former men's dormitory. This provided a new home for ICU's radio station WICR which has experienced an increased broadcasting range because WRTV has allowed WICR the use of its thousand-foot tower. A final change occurred when the Fine Arts Society joined WICR.

This year's freshmen enjoyed a "country good time" during Orientation weekend. The Freshman Orientation Committee was a special group of sophomore students selected to help the freshmen adjust to college life. One night, the Orientation Committee and the freshmen presented a talent show which kept the other students entertained. The students also enjoyed a dance following the country and western theme. President Sease invited the new students to meet him at a tea which was held in his home on Sunday afternoon. The freshmen also took advantage of a reception that was offered by the University Heights United Methodist Church. Other activities included: a cook-out, a western movie, and workshops which helped the new ICU students get acquainted with college life and the city of Indianapolis.

Registration day reminded other students that summer vacation was over and that it was time for another wonderful year of school. The day was one of long lines. Students got a chance to wait in the line and talk with friends, wait in line and receive their schedules, wait in line to get their pictures taken, and, of course, wait in line to make payments.

Long lines are a sign of registration day for both freshmen and returning students.

The sophomores in the Orientation Committee are concerned about the freshman student's adjustment to college life.

New Year Brings New Faces

Beauties Versus Beasts

Beyond the annual bonfire, the ice-cream bash, and the male beauty pageant, there was a new Homecoming week activity — a pep session during convocation. Members of the football team participated as contestants in a body contest. Winner of the "Best Legs" title was John Kennedy. The team of John Williams and Bob Bohannon achieved the renowned honor of "Best Body".

Homecoming Day began with a dorm-decorating contest. First place was awarded to North Hall.

The main event was the crowning of the Homecoming queen during half-time of the football game. Ginny Drews was crowned this year's queen by President Gene Sease. Kathy Leising, cheerleader, summed up the excitement of the day, "That was my first Homecoming game to cheer at. I was really excited. The fans were very receptive. And I really enjoyed the President's Ball after the football game."

Ah! The small, but oh so beautiful campus of ICJ. One of the main features of the school, next to the friendliness of the people, was the attractiveness of its grounds. With its well-kept lawns and towering trees, the campus was a comfortable place for studying, sleeping, or partying. Esch Hall was the main center of activity containing many of the administrative offices as well as the business, English, education, theatre, philosophy, and religion departments. Schwitzer Center was never empty as students visited the cafeteria, bookstore, and commuter lounge. Lilly Hall was the center for science, nursing, history, and political science. Buxton Hall was the home of the new communications department. Good Hall contained the art, music, and foreign language departments. Krannert Library housed not only the library, but also the office of President Sease, as well as a fully equipped audio-visual department and a TV lab. Nicoson Hall was the main center for physical fitness, but not for long. The Ruth Lilly Center was well on its way towards completion at the end of the school year.

Good Hall is the oldest building on campus and is now considered a center for the fine arts.

The Ruth Lilly Center is a new physical fitness facility containing an olympic-size pool.

Lilly Hall, which boasts an observatory, is the home of the science and nursing departments.

Esch Hall is probably the busiest building on campus, even in the summertime!

There Is Beauty In Growth Of Campus

B.C. Day: Back To Nature

This year, Brown County Day was held on a beautiful, warm, and sunny day in Brown County State Park.

The day began with a caravan starting at ICU and leading down to the park. There, many students played football and frisbee. Carmel apples were the highlight of the picnic lunch. Two deputations teams entertained the crowd with inspirational music. They were "Sonlight", consisting of Bob Albright, Paul Coats, DeDe Funkhouser, and Jane Kuroiwa, and "Praying Hands", an all-female team, whose members were D.J. Bush, Judi McGuire, and Yvonne Simerman.

Once again, the main event of the day was the tug-of-war contest which was won this year by the senior class. Of Brown County Day, Ben Arndt, senior class president, commented, "We had a great time! But attendance has really been down. More people should show up!"

Nursing students at ICU drudged through what is possibly one of the most tiring years of their lives. The mid-night oil burned many nights, and when the bell tolled 5:30 a.m., it was time to get up for clinical. It was study, study, study; practice, practice, practice; and perform perfectly. They endured nerve-racking skills classes, practicals, tests, and clinicals all in preparation for state boards and a long, prosperous career. One might have asked, why? Surely they would tell you that one has to love it! But as they walked down that aisle to receive their pins and diplomas (and maybe that little envelope that says they passed their state board examinations), often with tears of great pride and joy in their eyes, they knew it was all worth it!

Conventions Launch Media Ideas

The new communications department was launched through a series of conventions which were attended by many ICD students and faculty. These conventions helped the students gain a broader perspective on university publications and other communications fields.

Karen Glasser, ORACLE co-editor, and Cheryl Lamb, Reflector editor, attended a newspaper-yearbook convention in St. Louis. There they attended sessions on communications involving discussions on design, organization, ethics, and publications in private church schools.

Sandy Zehr and Dave Carson, WICR managers, attended a radio convention in Chicago. For the entire weekend, they attended workshops on station management and news casting and directing.

ICU's soccer team ended its 1982 season with five wins and eleven losses. This still young team has high hopes for next year, even with the many problems they had to face in their second year.

Throughout the season many of the players became ill and many were out of several matches for injuries. This was the reason for several of the teams losses. The final blow was the loss of Coach Joe Tugurian through his resignation in the middle of the season. However, the team would not give up, though they could have. They maintained spirit and hope under their new coach Ali El-Messoussi. Two of the team's five wins occurred after Ali became the coach.

A more experienced, but still young, team and the enthusiasm of a new coach are in store for the 1983 season.

Joe Oliphant was chosen 1982 team captain. The honor of the Kelso-Reid Mental Attitude award was bestowed upon Sandy Zehr. Joe Oliphant was named to the All-Conference team and was chosen Most Valuable Player and Haluk Bilgen scored the most goals during the season.

Greyhounds Take Third In Conference

"We played very good basketball in our conference games but our main problem was not being able to win games on the road or our non-conference games. With much experience coming back next year we should be much better," said Ed Wineinger of the 82-83 basketball team.

Health/Fitness Center Is Named

The FITNESS FOR THE FUTURE campaign began with the main intent of providing a new physical fitness facility for the university. This goal was reached as the finishing touches were put upon the Ruth Lilly Center for Health and Fitness in July of '83.

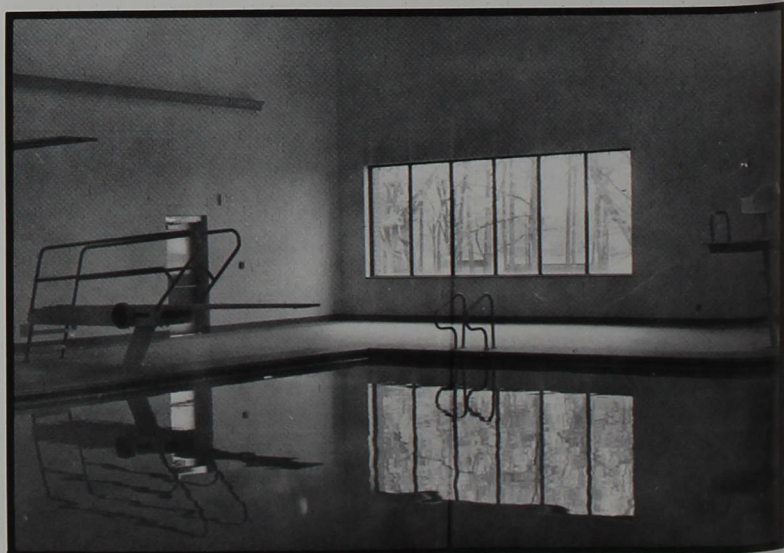

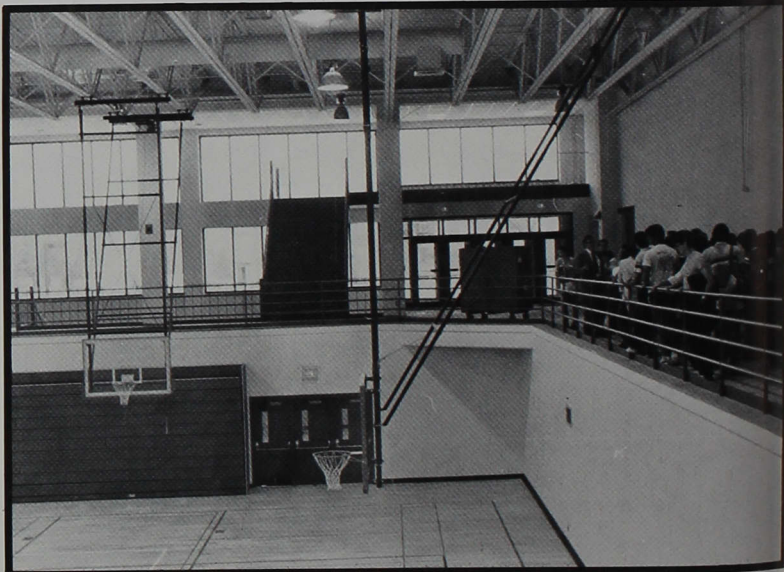

The facility was designed to house the rapidly growing physical therapy and physical education departments. It also was built to provide complete facilities for career preparation in pre-medicine, nursing, and other health care fields. Over twenty new faculty offices, physiology laboratories, kinesiology laboratories, classrooms, and other academic facilities were included. Two of the main features included were the pools — one olympic-size pool for competition and another for diving — both equipped with the capability of under-water observation. Also included in the building were racquetball courts, a gymnasium, a jacuzzi, and a new wrestling room.

A prospective student gazes through one of the observation windows provided for the pools.

Cyclorama Defies Traditions

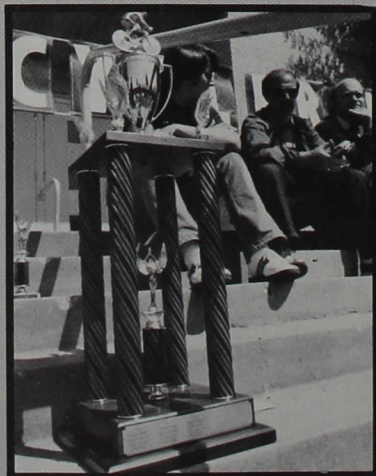

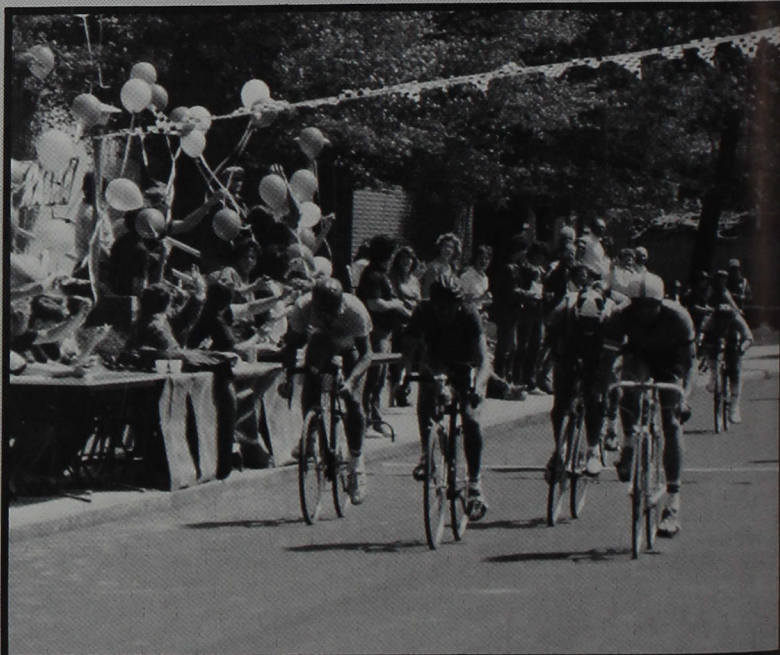

This year's Cyclorama defied tradition in several ways. First of all, a parking lot replaced the green grass of the horseshoe and students had to look harder for a comfortable spot from which to view the race. Secondly, ICU had no princess this year to preside over the race. Also conspicuously absent was the usually large number of sunbathers. While a sunny day, it was cool, and students preferred to keep on their clothes rather than risk colds. And, this year, the traditional race winners, the Underriders, were replaced by a new championship team composed of Dean Rich, Doug Rich, Doug Zehr, and Craig Snellenberger. Laura Kreiger, Debbie Law, Kim Epler, and Pam White were the members of the winning women's team. This team set a new record for the race.

How valuable is a college education?

As tuition rates increase, students and their parents are becoming increasingly concerned about the economic return on dollars spent on a college education. They ask admissions counselors, guidance personnel, teachers, and other academic advisors for assurance that a dollar spent on higher education will reap economic benefits in the future. They ask career counselors for guarantees about future employment, and they demand promises about future earning power after the college degree has been granted. The current economic climate has heightened concern for financial security, and those who seek college degrees — and those who help finance them — are justifiably concerned about "return on investment."

Any knowledgeable counselor can help ease the concerns of these students and their parents by citing statistics to reaffirm the economic value of a college education. Furthermore, they can show how a college education enhances one's employability, makes one less susceptible to layoffs, and yes, increases one's earning power. The Occupational Outlook Handbook, the Department of Labor employment statistics, the College Placement Council Salary Survey, and hundreds of other reliable sources can be quoted to verify the information the counselor gives. But do these sources, these data, really answer the original question: How valuable is a college education?

There is no doubt that the data confirm the economic value of a college education (for most people), but economic statistics alone cannot measure the value of a person's education in the broadest sense. The intrinsic value of a college education cannot be measured solely in dollars and cents. How can one put a price tag or figure the return on an investment on the ability to think critically, to communicate articulately, to reason logically? Moreover, how can one measure increased awareness of the world of nature, sensitivity to one's fellow beings, appreciation for the arts, or understanding of and respect for one's own heritage and that of others? The college graduate who demands only a financial reward as proof of the value of four years of college has a very limited understanding of the phrase, "value of a college education."

The immediate concern of a college graduate is employment, salary, fringe benefits — and perhaps repaying a college loan. But as the months and years pass (and the economic return on the original investment has been realized), an alumnus can reflect on his/her college years and remember those moments and experiences that had the greatest impact and, consequently, the most lasting value:

- ... the meaningful conversation with a professor outside of class.
- ... the time in class when everything the professor had been saying all semester "fell into place."
- ... the day when an issue was explored for the first time — with an open mind.
- ... the lively intellectual discussions with friends in the dorm or the lounge or the hallway.
- ... the discussion of the nuclear disarmament issue.
- ... the demonstration against world hunger.
- ... the growth of a personal relationship.

Each person who attends a college or university is transformed somewhat by the total experience. Some have greater success in college than others; some will have more positive memories than others. But all will be affected — in some unique way. How valuable is a college education? It is as valuable as one chooses to make it — or as one chooses to view it.

The Value Of A College Education

Students Experience Convocation

Convocation at Indiana Central meant many different things to students. For some, it was a time to experience new cultures, different lifestyles, unfamiliar subjects, and others' points of view. For others, it was either study-time or sleep-time.

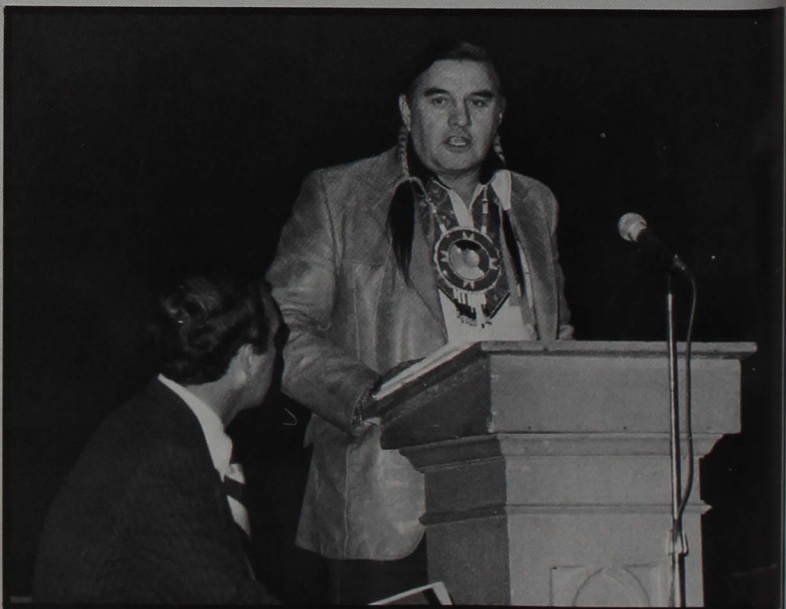

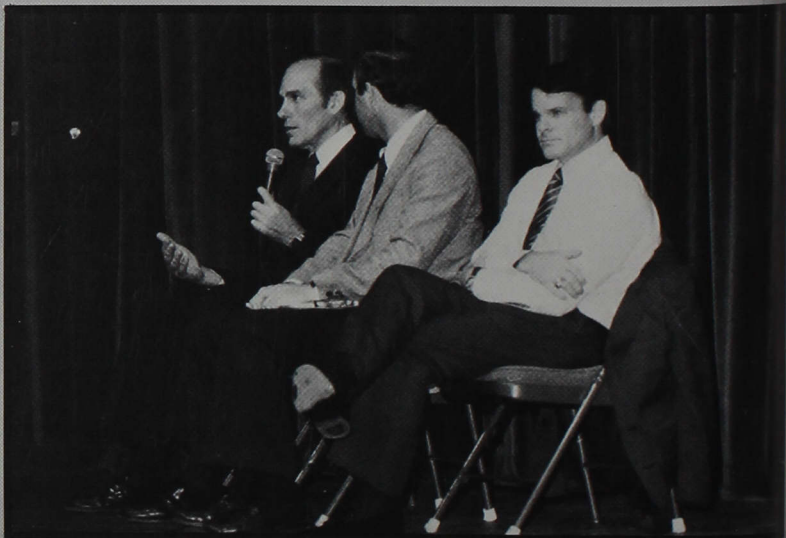

The opening convocation in the fall was a formal one in which the faculty wore their caps and gowns and the Esch scholar Joy Partridge was honored. After the first convocation, the others were more informal. Twice a week, for one hour, students sat through convocation. The subjects were wide and varied: politicians, Central Council, representatives of foreign cultures, the ever-popular Dance Kaleidoscope, feminists, ministers, etc. Probably the most popular convo this year was a pep session for the Homecoming football game. Students either experienced or survived convocation.

Norman Bellecourt, a leader of the American Indian Movement, addresses students in convocation.

Members of Dance Kaleidoscope perform a dance which celebrates nature during convo.

Last fall, the Esch scholar was announced during the opening convocation. Joy Partridge was chosen this year's recipient of the I. Lynd Esch scholarship. Joy had one of the highest academic indexes in years at ICU. Joy accepted the award from President Sease and gave a speech as her father, professional staff member Ken Partridge, watched with pride.

Another group of high academic students who were honored during the year was Phi Alpha Epsilon, the freshman honor society. ICU's Executive Committee of Epsilon Sigma Alpha, senior honor society, sponsored a reception on November 22 in Recital Hall for twenty-four students who were selected for membership into Phi Alpha Epsilon. In order to qualify for Phi Alpha Epsilon, the students had to earn a scholarship index of at least 10.000 with a minimum of 30 semester hours during the first year of university work. Selection was made by university faculty members.

Presidential Aides were chosen this year by President Sease to assist him in welcoming guests to the campus and to act as hosts and hostesses at social functions throughout the year. Students were chosen on the basis of their scholarship and leadership abilities.

A new chapter of Phi Alpha Theta, an international honor society in history, was established at Indiana Central this year with twenty charter members.

The installing official for the Alpha Alpha Upsilon chapter was Dr. Robert M. Sutton, professor emeritus of history at the University of Illinois and member of the advisory board of Phi Alpha Theta.

Ten students and ten faculty members comprised the charter class of initiates. Faculty charter members were: Dr. David Anderson, Dr. Noel Baker, Mrs. Carolyn Blackwell, Miss Joy Caskey, Dr. Charles Guthrie, Dr. Fred Hill, Dr. Marga Meier, Dr. Roland Nelson, Dr. James Riggs, and Dr. Carl Stockton.

The new honorary elected the following officers for the Alpha Alpha Upsilon chapter: Richard McMinn, president; Angela Grigsby, vice president; Gerald Morgan, secretary-treasurer; Jeff Salyers, historian; and Dr. David Anderson, faculty advisor.

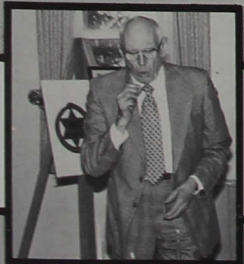

Requirements for membership in Phi Alpha Theta were: at least twelve semester hours of history with a GPA above a B average in all history courses and a B average in two-thirds of all other courses.

Students Gather for M*A*S*H's Last

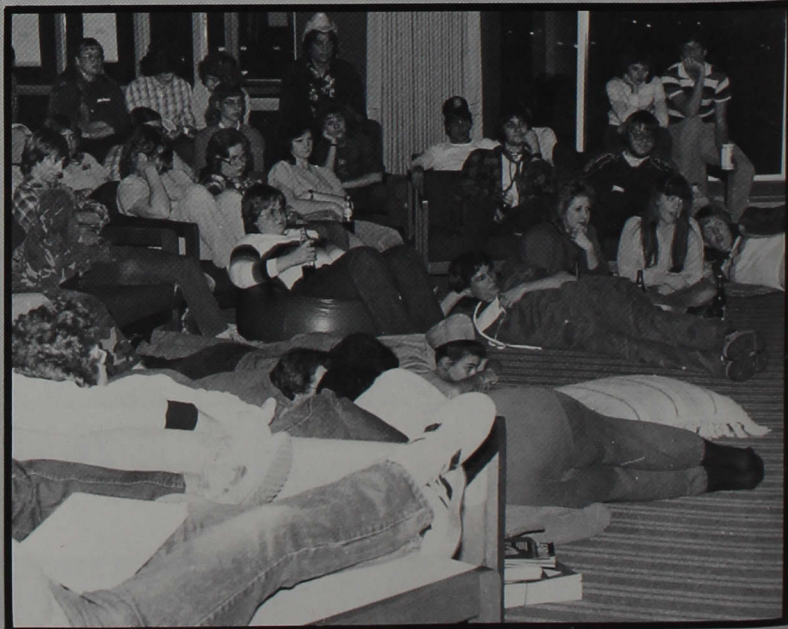

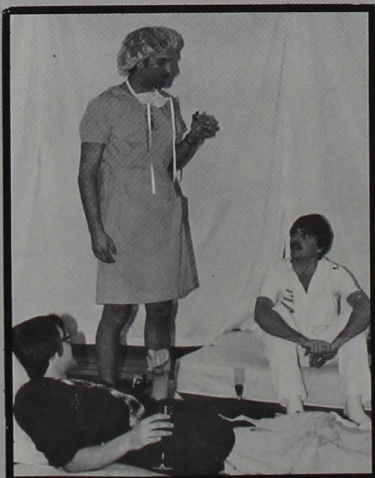

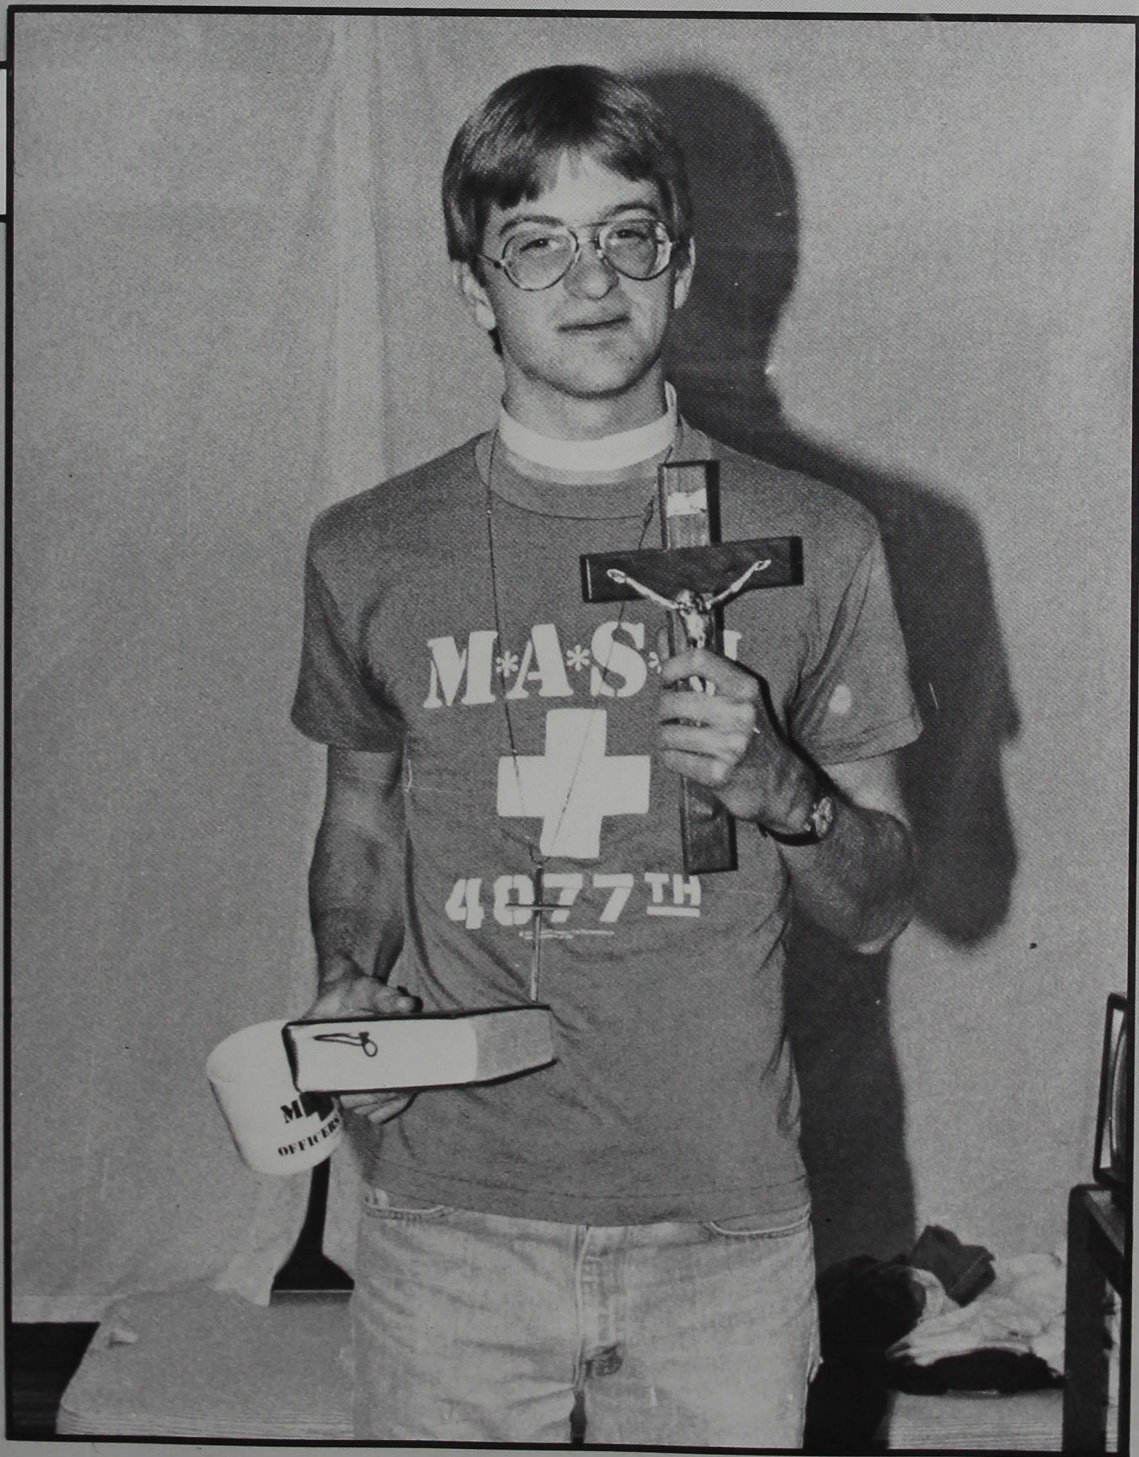

This year was a momentous one in many ways, one of which was the television showing of the last episode of M*A*S*H. Students gathered to view the last episode together and sadly partied away the hours. Medical dress was proper for the occasion, with scrub suits being the most popular. Parties were held in lobbies and in dorm rooms. But students were not the only ones who were sad to see M*A*S*H go. Members of the faculty and staff had their own parties, including the Public Relations party which was attended by President Gene Sease. M*A*S*H cookies and green M*A*S*H punch were served. M*A*S*H may be gone, but the reruns go on!

North Hall residents gather in the lobby to watch the last episode of M*A*S*H.

This year, Indiana Central had two different sets of cheerleaders. There were football cheerleaders and basketball cheerleaders. This enabled the young women to devote more time to their specific sport and freed them for study-time during the other season. Cheerleaders kept up spirit by organizing pixie groups and pep sessions for the teams they served. They also cheered at each game during the season. The cheerleaders were a great source of enthusiasm for both team members and spectators.

Cheerleaders Change Faces This Year

Spirit Groups Aid Athletes

Of course, cheerleaders were not the only spirit group at ICU. In fact, there were several.

The Crimson Steppers group of young women worked year round on the football field and basketball court. They performed coordinated routines during half-time of the games. Their enthusiasm and ability combined to form the perfect half-time entertainment.

The Soccermates, Escapees, and Basemates performed similar duties. Soccermates helped keep score and cheer for the soccer team. The Escapees were timers and scorekeepers for the wrestling team. The Basemates kept score and ran the concession stand during baseball games. All groups held money-raising events or activities such as the Basemates' car wash and the Escapees' birthday cakes. These young women were commended for their support of Indiana Central's athletes at the sports banquets.

The play The Diary of Anne Frank is familiar to most students. Many read the play in high school. The ICU production of Anne Frank's story, directed by Dr. Richard Williams, was performed on October 8, 9, and 10 in Ransburgh Auditorium.

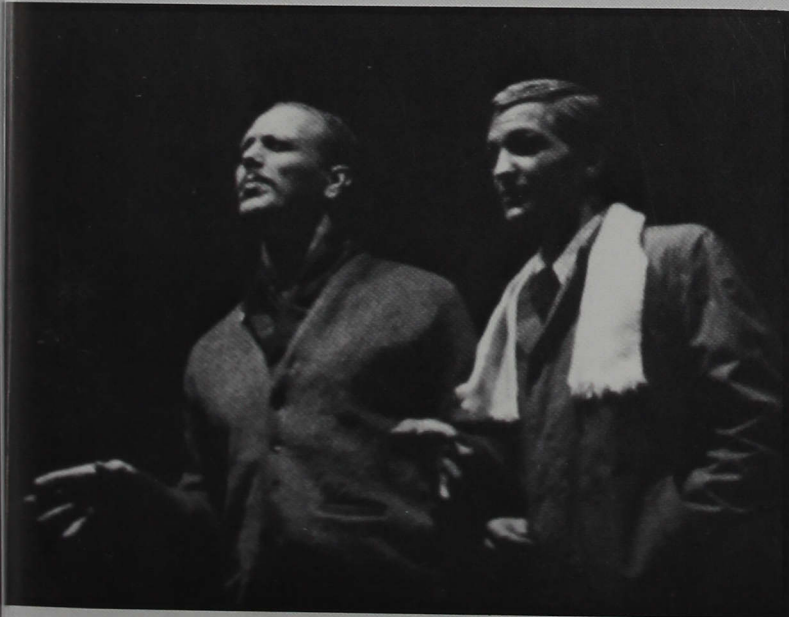

The story involved eight people who hid from the Nazis for two years in an attic during WW II. While in hiding, Anne Frank, a young Jewish girl, kept a diary of their daily lives, their hopes, and their fears. They were finally captured, and Anne's father found her diary some time after her death in a Nazi concentration camp. Yet, for all her suffering, Anne's final words were, "I still believe, in spite of everything, that people are really good at heart."

Anne (Sheila Brodie) keeps her account of their two years in the attic.

The Diary Of Anne Frank

The Importance Of Being Earnest

The Importance of Being Earnest is a delightful romantic comedy written by Oscar Wilde which was performed in Ransburgh Auditorium on November 19, 20, and 21 by the ICU theatre department.

Though it was actually quite complex, the play could be summed up as follows. Jack lives in the country with Cecily, his ward. He invented a mischievous brother named Ernest in order to get away to the city. Jack desired to marry the Honorable Gwendolen Fairfax, Lady Bracknell's daughter. However, he had been adopted, and Lady Bracknell did not want a son-in-law with an unknown parentage. Meanwhile, Algernon, Jack's friend and Lady Bracknell's nephew, went to the country to meet Cecily under the pretense of being Ernest, Jack's wayward "brother." Cecily and he decided to marry, as did Gwendolen and Jack. Cecily and Gwendolen met and locked horns when they thought they were engaged to the same person (Gwendolen thought Jack was named Ernest and Cecily thought Algernon was named Ernest). In the end, everything worked out, for Jack discovered he was really the son of Lady Bracknell's sister and was, therefore, Algernon's brother. In fact, his Christian name was Ernest! The path was clear for his and Gwendolen's, as well as Algernon's and Cecily's, marriage.

Lady Bracknell (Mary Susan Armstrong) thoroughly questions Jack about his natural parents.

The Honorable Gwendolen Fairfax (Mary Katherine Richmond) quiets her fiance Jack (Michael Case).

Algernon (Richard T. Williams) devours another cucumber sandwich as Lane (Keith Cline) offers his opinion on the state of marriage.

Becket was the story of the relationship between two powerful men — King Henry the Second and Thomas Becket. Becket had been a good friend and advisor to Henry for years. Thus, when the old Archbishop of Canterbury died, Henry made Becket archbishop, thinking he would have an ally in the Church. However, Becket was serious about his position, and his moral conscience led him to oppose the corrupt nature of Henry's rule. Henry, finally pushed to the brink, asked out loud if no one would rid him of this problem. His faithful barons heard him and took his words to heart, and they murdered Becket as he knelt praying. Thus ended the life of Thomas Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury.

Becket was performed by a cast of over thirty members on February 11, 12, and 13 in Ransburgh Auditorium. Becket was directed by Dr. Richard Williams and the set was designed by James Ream.

King Henry (John Lampson) informs Thomas Becket (Steven Miller) of his plans to make him the Archbishop of Canterbury.

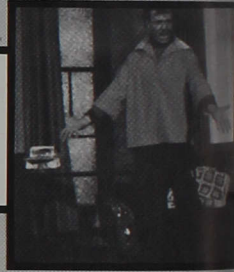

John Lampson was "brilliant as Henry" and Steven Miller was "a comparable match in the title role."

Becket Or The Honour Of God

The Mousetrap

Agatha Christie's murder mystery The Mousetrap was this year's dinner theatre production. The Mousetrap was performed on March 18, 19, 25, and 26 in Schwitzer Dining Hall. The Mousetrap, which first opened on November 25, 1952, is also known for being the longest running play in history. Part of the reason for its success is the plot devised by Agatha Christie. However, it would not be fair to reveal the plotline or the identity of the murderer. So, whodunit? Ida Know!

Guys And Dolls

Guys and Dolls was presented by the ICU theatre and music departments on May 19, 20, and 21. Guys and Dolls, a musical fable of Broadway, was produced and directed by Richard Williams. Paul Krasnovsky conducted the orchestra. Scenic designer and technical director was James Ream. Choreography was by Rachel Redmond Cheesman.

It all started when Nathan Detroit bet Sky Masterson $1,000 that he could not get Sister Sarah Brown to go to Havana with him for dinner. Well, Sister Sarah was in danger of having her mission closed because of a lack of souls in need of saving. So Sky promised Sarah twelve sinners (the gamblers) if she would go to Havana with him. She went with him and got a little tipsy, and she fell in love with him. In the meantime, Nathan had been engaged to Adelaide for fourteen years. Adelaide was tired of waiting; she wanted to get married — now! Especially since she had told her mother they were already married and had five kids! Sky finally got twelve sinners for Sarah, and the mission was saved. Romance won out in the end, and Sky and Sarah were married with Nathan and Adelaide on their way to the altar.

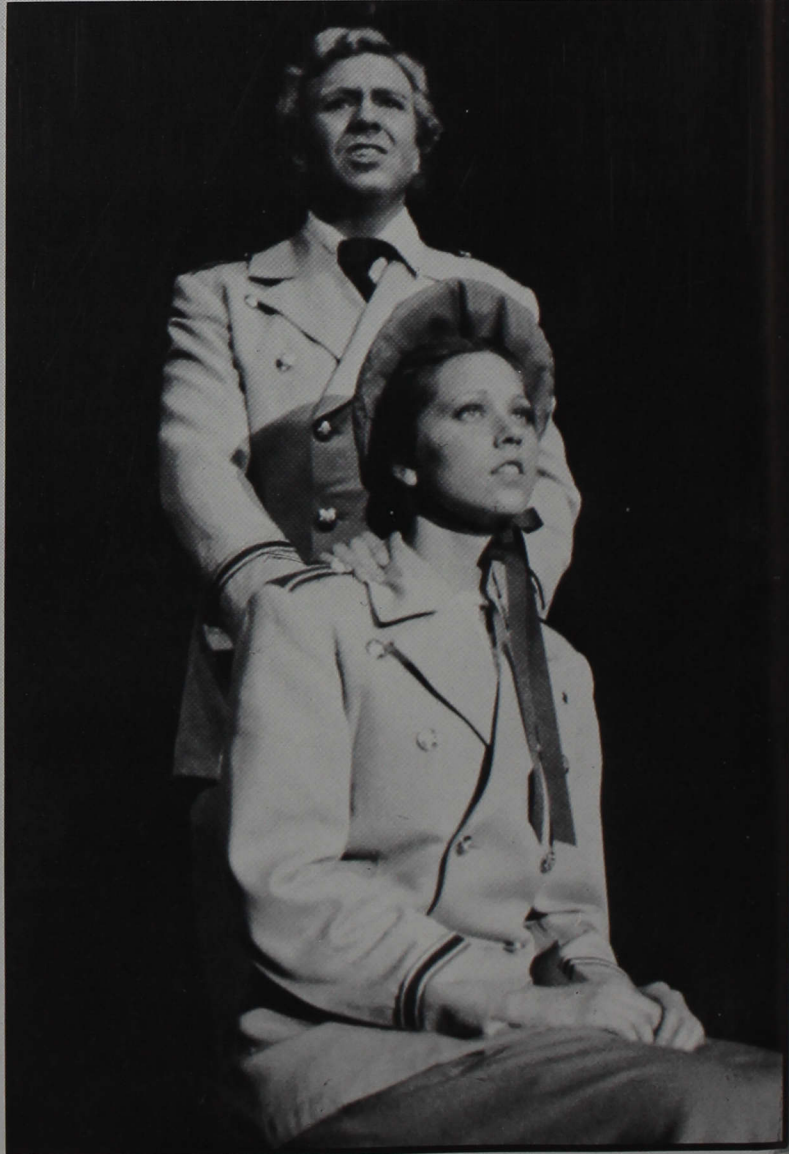

Adelaide (Mary Katherine Richmond) and the Hot Box Girls entertain the customers in "Take Back Your Mink" on Broadway.

Arvide Abernathy (Brian Fisher) sings "More I Cannot Wish" as he tries to comfort love-smitten Sister Sarah Brown (Paula Ream).

Adelaide (Mary Katherine Richmond) sings "Adelaide's Lament" bewailing her overly long engagement — fourteen years — to Nathan Detroit.

Gamblers Nathan Detroit (Michael Klass) and Sky Masterson (James Ream) discuss where to hold the next crap game.

Arvide Abernathy (Brian Fisher) tells Adelaide and Nathan (Mary Katherine Richmond and Michael Klass) that he has just married Sky and Sarah (James and Paula Ream), and that he would be more than glad to marry them also.

Several university-sponsored music organizations performed concerts throughout the year in churches and at high schools, other universities, and public functions. Two of these groups were the Central Singers and the symphonic wind ensemble. The Central Singers was a choral group and the symphonic wind ensemble was an orchestral group.

Membership in the Beta Psi chapter of Mu Phi Epsilon was open to students majoring or minoring in music or students displaying outstanding musical ability who had completed one semester of elemental theory. Selection was influenced by scholarship, musicianship, and service.

Music Groups Change The Beat At ICU

Celebrating Life At ICU

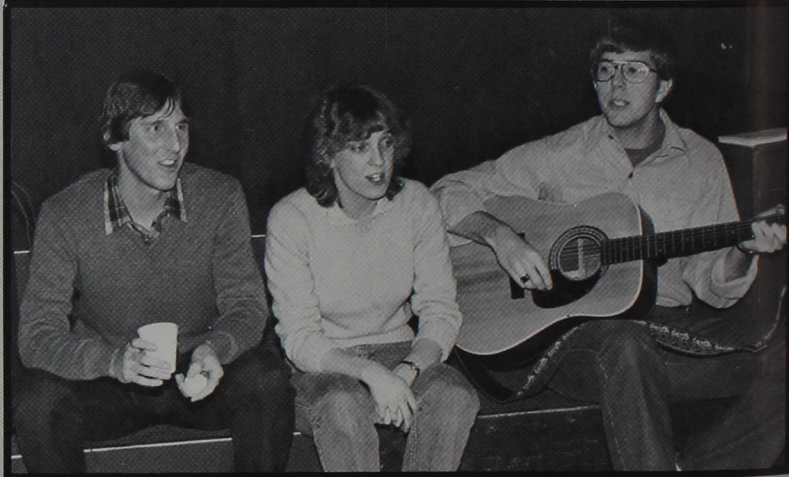

Religion was as important in '82-'83 at Indiana Central as always. This was not just because ICU was a Methodist university, but because its students were caring Christians to whom religion was an important part of their daily lives. Some of these students formed what are known as "deputation teams" to spread the joy and love of Jesus Christ to others through music. Other students worked hard year round by providing mid-week services, discussion groups, religious activities, and Religious Awareness Week during convocation, among other activities. These students did so many things out of love for others that they were fine examples for students at ICU.

Dormitory life this year was one of those elusive concepts which could not be described in just so many words.

Dorm life at ICU was filled with parties, music, talking, dancing, studying, and sleeping (as much as was possible). Although not all peaches and cream, students benefitted from the experience of living away from home. They had to learn to rely on themselves to do things which their parents had always done for them before. Things such as feeding themselves, doing their laundry, cleaning up, etc., etc. The independence and responsibility gained somewhat made up for the money which could have been saved by living at home. (Although, in the case of Dailey Hall, that is debatable!)

In any case, dorm students survived the grueling year of academics at ICU, and many were heard to say that they would be returning in the fall to the same dorm!

Lunchtime at ICU means many things, but, unfortunately for Dave McCollom, it doesn't mean Heinken.

The girls from North Hall know that the thing to do on a fall afternoon is play football.

Sunbathing is a favorite ICU pastime, and this school year was no exception. As soon as the first sunlight appeared to announce the coming of spring, students were shedding their clothes to worship the tanning god.

The students this year saw warm weather as early as February, although May was fairly cool for Indianapolis. Summer came late, and, unfortunately, so did many tans. Unless, of course, one happened to have been lucky enough — or rich enough — to visit warmer climates over spring break. Somehow, though, students managed to get some sun while "studying" for their fleximester classes.

Amy Regensburger dreams of an ice-cold pitcher of ice tea (?) as she works on getting a tan.

ICU Beaches Are Busy Places

SENIORS

The 1983 Baccalaureate/Commencement exercises boasted the largest graduating class in the history of Indiana Central. Five hundred candidates received diplomas.

Dr. John R. Knecht, President of the United Theological Seminary, gave an inspiring address to the graduating seniors.

During commencement, senior Myra Montgomery sang "Psalm 150" and Senior Class President Ben Arndt passed the torch to Jon Houghtalen, president of the class of 1984.

Those receiving honorary degrees were: Hezekiah S. Malone, Jr., who received a Doctor of Divinity degree; Fred Armstrong and Earl Harris, who received Doctor of Laws degrees; and Dr. John R. Knecht, who received a Doctor of Letters degree.

In addition to receiving an honorary degree, Hezekiah Malone also saw his son Kyle graduate. Kyle Malone received a Bachelor of the Arts degree.

Commencement means beginning, and that is exactly what the class of '83 has done. They have begun to live a new life which is very different from that of a college student. Whether they went on to pursue post-graduate degrees, joined the work force, or married, their lives changed, and in some way, large or small, they have grown.

Even though they have to look for new housing, married students Sally Endres Burnell and Joe Burnell are glad to be graduating "cum laude" from Indiana Central.

Myra Montgomery, a bachelor of science candidate, sings Psalm 150 before the capacity crowd in Nicoson Hall.

Administration — '83

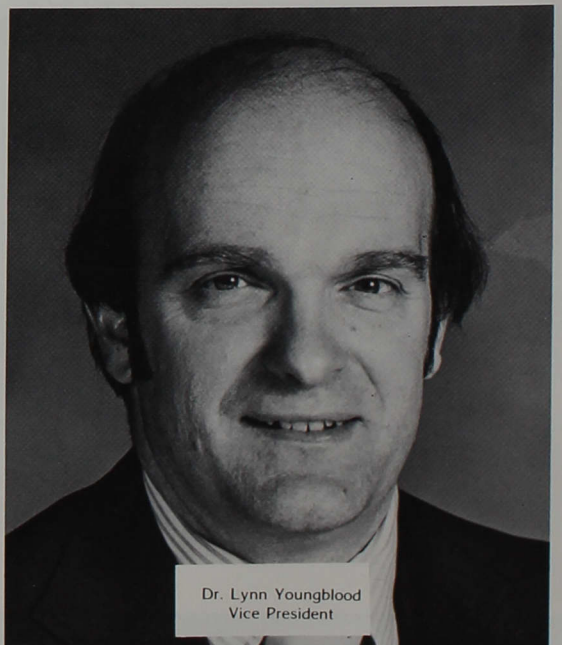

President Gene E. Sease

Dr. Sease cares for the needs of Indiana Central University by giving the personal touch.

Dr. Lynn Youngblood
Vice President

James P. Lamberson 1929-1983

The students, faculty and friends of Indiana Central University mourn the loss of Professor James Lamberson who died on January 1, 1983 as a result of a heart attack.

Professor Lamberson came to Indiana Central in 1966 and served as Chairman of the Music Department since 1972. In addition to his responsibilities at the university, he was serving as Minister of Music at Northwood Christian Church.

Jim was a 1950 graduate of Southwest Missouri State University where, in addition to graduating with honors, he was elected to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities. He received his M.M. degree in Organ, with distinction, at Indiana University and had completed his course work towards the doctoral degree at the University of Illinois in 1974.

It would be difficult to evaluate Jim's influence and estimate his impact on our campus and our community; those things really can't be measured. What can be said of this man, and stated without reservation, is that he was totally committed to his assigned and assumed responsibilities. Within and without his professional world he had established a reputation for being a man of integrity. Professor Lamberson was dedicated to his teaching and his students and was a highly respected member of the campus faculty.

He had served as a member of the Board of Young Audiences for many years and was chairman of the board from 1979 to 1981. Other memberships include the National Association of School Musicians, the Music Education National Conference, the Choristers' Guild and the College Art Association.

Jim had served as Dean of the American Guild of Organists and during the summer of 1981 was selected to participate at the International Academy for Organists in Haarlem, Netherlands. On most of his trips abroad he managed to perform or at least hear performances on most of the great cathedral organs of England and the Continent. He was a popular recitalist at home in the United States as well.

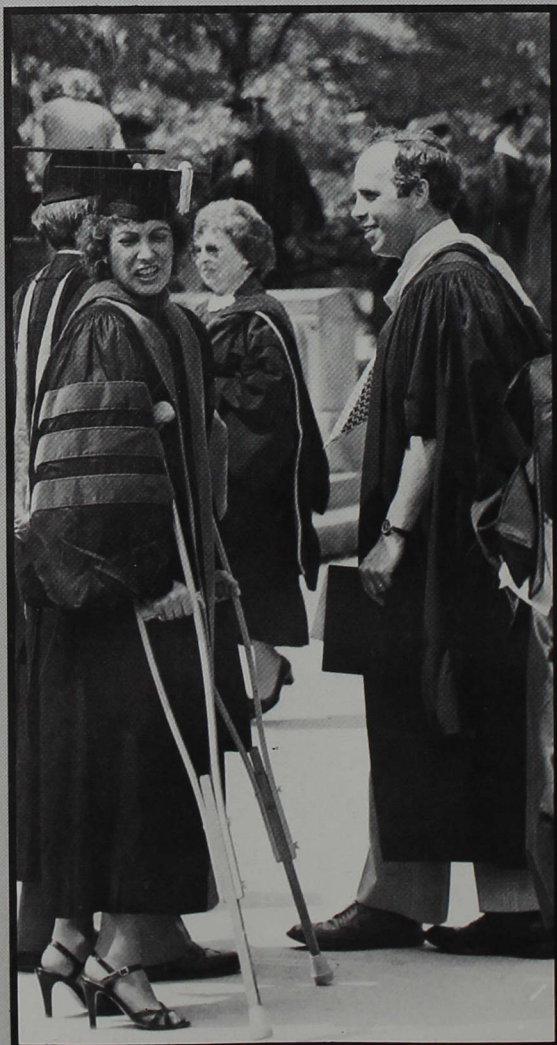

In addition to his regular professional commitments, Jim found that extra dimension of satisfaction and fulfillment through hobbies and extra-curricular interests. In 1973 he moved to the country and built his year-round retreat for what he considered the most rewarding years of his life. He was totally immersed in the renewing therapy of gardening, reading and travel. During the last decade he visited Europe seven times and traveled through Central America. With each trip his itinerary was designed to reinforce his historical-cultural enthusiasms. Those additional "non-professional" interests contributed much toward that meaningful level of teaching Indiana Central University students had come to expect. Just days before his death Jim was finalizing plans for another summer excursion to western Europe.

The James P. Lamberson Memorial Fund was established at the time of his death. Contributions may be sent to the Development Office, Indiana Central University, 1400 East Hanna Avenue, Indianapolis, Indiana 46227.

1983 Oracle Staff

This year, the experience of one former editor combined with the freshness of a new editor helped ease the editorial burden of a 160-page yearbook. Karen Glasser Deane and Mary Alton Stillabower joined their creative efforts to work as co-editors of the 1983 Oracle. A small, but always willing to work, staff made this year's book a success.

There are so many to thank and so little space, but here goes . . . Thanks to Dr. Ken Borden, Phil Winning from Josten's Yearbook Co., Ed Sims from National School Studios, Peter Noot, Keith VanDeman, Doris Fowler, Claire Moore, Diane Metheny, and Gerald Boyce. A special thanks to Jackie Johnson, and a world of thanks to our multi-talented adviser — Carolyn Sfreddo. The best of luck to Debbie Bowell, sports editor, in law school. Thanks to our beloved husbands, Steve Deane and Jeff Stillabower, for putting up with deadline stress. And a very special thanks to Dr. Fred Hill for his support and for making this year the best one yet!

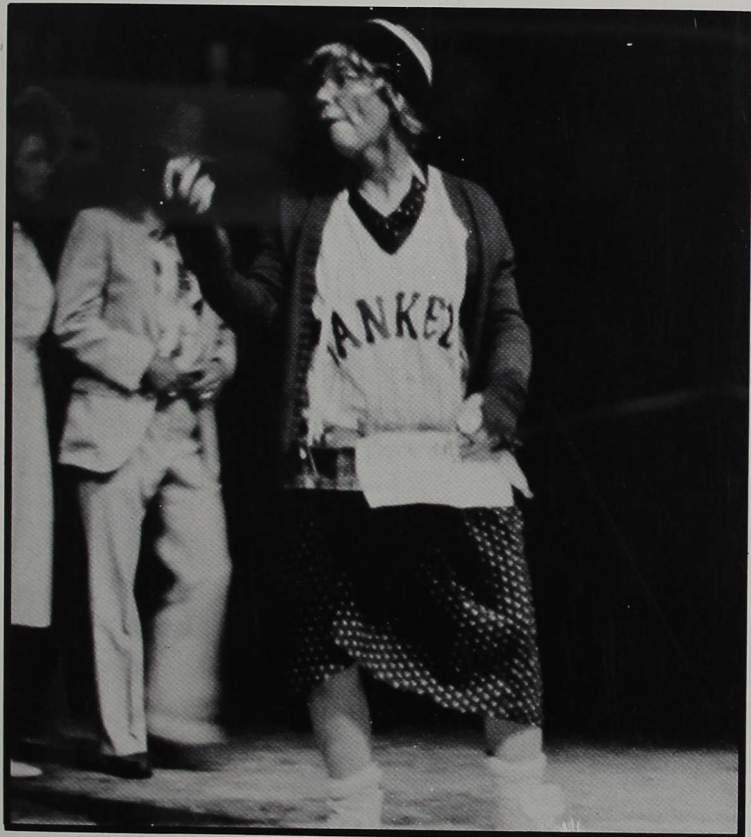

Debbie Bowell, sports editor, says that she will miss her dog Mandy when she leaves to attend the University of Dayton Law School this fall.

The 1983 Oracle co-editors, Mary Alton Stillabower and Karen Glasser Deane, give each other a pat on the back for a job well (finally) done.
