More than blossoms opened Spring 1994 when the new Christel DeHaan Fine Arts Center became the new home for the departments of Art and Music, leaving Good Hall to become the new home for several other departments and programs.

The U of I experience

Nestled on the southside of Indianapolis, the University of Indianapolis, or U of I as it is known to students, is home to approximately 3300 full time and part-time students. The campus is small, as are the classes, providing a more intimate learning environment.

In addition to classes, the university sponsors many activities for students. These include a variety of dances, picnics, competitions and the ever popular annual Brown County Day.

Four residence halls house the approximately 700 residential students. New Hall, North Hall and Warren Hall are all co-ed while Cravens Hall, which is also home to the nurse and counseling center, is reserved for female residents.

The university also has a fine sports facility in the Ruth Lilly Center and Nicoson Hall. The facilities feature an Olympic-sized swimming pool, an indoor track, two basketball courts and a dance studio, as well as offices for all of the athletic department, the sports information office, physical therapy and occupational therapy personnel.

The newly renovated Schwitzer Center is the home of the campus food services and the campus snack bar, Streets Corner. It also houses the bookstore, the game room and the Student Life and ISG offices.

Esch Hall, named in honor of former U of I President I. Lynd Esch, is where students attend English, business, Lilly Hall houses the political sciences, behavioral sciences, math, science and nursing departments. With the addition of the Christel DeHaan Fine Arts Center some of these departments are expected to move into Good Hall to rooms vacated by Art and Music.

Good Hall, the oldest building on the U of I campus, houses the foreign languages, social work, continuing education and the campus police. First semester, it was also home to the Music and Art departments, but they have expanded into the Christel DeHaan Fine Arts Center.

Buxton Hall, a former dormitory, is where the Communications department is located. The campus radio station, WICR, The Student/Reflector, The Oracle and the forensics team are all found in Buxton Hall. In addition, The Fine Arts Society of Indianapolis, which broadcasts over WICR, also has offices in Buxton.

The offices of the president, media services and the writing lab are all located in Krannert Memorial Library, which includes archives as well as the regularly library collection. The Library went on-line this year, with a computerized card catalogue.

Students move into U of I

August 28 and 29 marked moving in days for residence hall students at U of I.

New students began moving in Saturday at 8 a.m. This earlier move-in date was done as part of orientation weekend. Festivities included The President's Dinner, a dance, meetings and workshops.

Returning students moved in Sunday. This happened to be the same day as registration, which made for a hectic time with scheduling.

The student residence assistants were kept busy the entire weekend. They served as an information service for students and their parents. In addition to helping students move their possessions into the dorms and find their rooms, they also passed out keys and information.

The RA's and the Residence Hall Directors were also available to answer any questions that parents and students had about residence hall life or college life in general.

Lisa Precourt was crowned queen of the 1993 football homecoming festivities October 2 during halftime of the game at Key Stadium. The Greyhounds went on to lose the homecoming game to the Northmen of Northwood University.

While this dampened the spirits of U of I fans, it did not take away the memories of the week's activities. These included a dorm decorating contest, of which New Hall was the winner, the Velcro Wall and the Bungee Run.

The infamous male beauty pageant was again a part of football homecoming. Senior Pat Spray received a great deal of teasing by many of his younger football teammates.

U of I gets a facelift

Students returning to campus in the fall found many changes. The biggest changes were the growing Christel DeHaan Fine Arts Center, the complete renovation of Schwitzer Center and the addition of a parking lot and drainage pond.

The Schwitzer concourse level was redone, giving the office of student life a larger space. A roomier bookstore was built and new mailboxes were added. This allowed students to each have his or her own box. Streets Corner also received a face lift. The floors were redone and windows were added to give it a more 'open' look. In addition, the floors were redone throughout the basement and new furniture was purchased for the concourse. The former bookstore was transformed into a game room which opened in the fall.

Upstairs larger side dining rooms were added. The President's Dining Room was moved into the former lobby. A new trustee meeting room was also built in previous lobby area. The Ober Dining Hall was shelled out and given a whole new look, including new lighting, a new serving area and a sun porch. A better handicap access ramp was installed to make the building completely handicap accessible.

In Nicoson Hall the gym floor was stripped and repainted with the new logo in the center. A new color scheme in the school colors was also done.

Behind the library a new parking lot was added to replace the one where the Fine Arts Center was being built. Next to North Hall a small pond was added to aid in draining the campus.

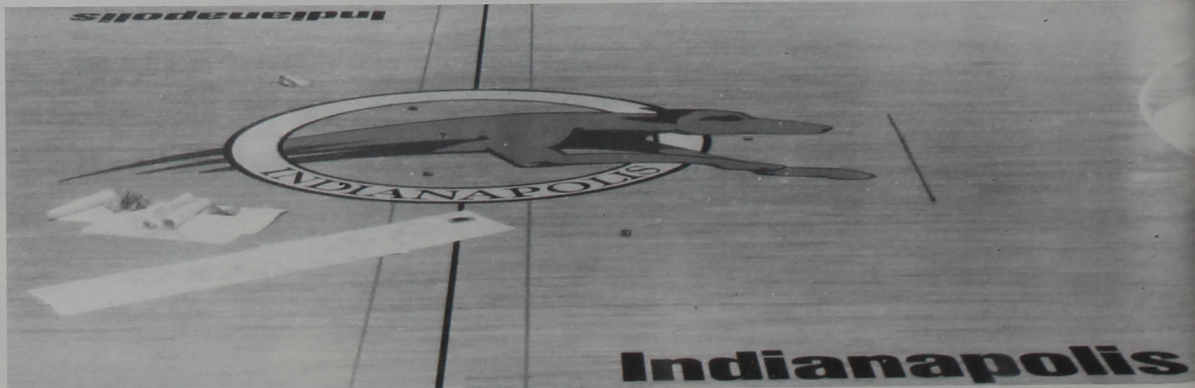

These renovations are part of a total campus renovation schedule, which will enhance campus appeal and make it more accessible.

Students "leaf" to Brown County

The weather was beautiful and the fall colors made for a picture-perfect annual Brown County Day October 13. The campus shut down and students, faculty and staff spent the day at Brown County State Park.

There a picnic lunch was served by the food services and class activities were planned.

"I enjoyed going to Brown county because a couple of my friends and I camped out the night before."

These included the tug-o'-war, balloon toss and three-legged race.

Students also had the opportunity to hike trails, ride horses, play touch football and generally relax.

Sophomore Esmerelda Marquez said, "I enjoyed going to Brown County because a couple of my friends and I camped out the night before." Many students elected to take this option, but others drove down for the day.

A Kiss to Build a Dream On

The ISG-sponsored Winter Formal took place December 4 at the Post Road Community Center.

Each person in attendance received a commemorative Beavis and Butthead t-shirt with the dance theme design, A Kiss To Build a Dream On.

The disk jockey played a variety of modern music and "classic" 80's rock. In addition, a few "golden oldies" from the 60's and 70's managed to sneak into his rotation. The dance theme, Louis Armstrong's classic A Kiss To Build A Dream On, made the musical selections complete.

The holiday decor added to the festive atmosphere. Christmas wreaths, snowmen and big red bows were everywhere.

U of I reigns as Indy's Top Dog

The U of I Greyhounds avenged their record of two ties and four losses by outscoring the Butler Bulldogs 34-21 to reign as Indy's "Top Dog."

The last time U of I defeated cross-town rival Butler in football was 1986. Those were the days when Ronald Reagan was President of the United States, The New York Mets were the World Series champions, the Chicago Bears were the champs of the Super Bowl, the Boston Celtics and Los Angeles Lakers were the kings of the NBA, the Louisville Cardinals were defending NCAA hoops champions, Dionne Warwick's That's What Friends are For was atop the pop charts and U of I was known as Indiana Central University.

"Trophy or no trophy, we still won."

Unlike previous years the top dog trophy was no longer up for grabs. Butler made this clear before the game was ever played. Their reason for this was the Top Dog game is no longer part of the regular football season for the Circle City rivals. Butler changed conferences, therefore making this game an end-of-the-year exhibition. This did not dampen the celebration for U of I fans, though. Their attitude was "Trophy or no trophy, we still won!"

Convo brings new experiences to U of I

Convocation, a part of every Tuesday afternoon for U of I students, offered a variety of programs, both on and off campus, for general and performance credit.

Convocation provides the opportunity to attend programs of intellectual and/or cultural significance outside of the normal classroom setting. Among the events offered were music performances, lectures, demonstrations and theatre productions.

Full-time students attend convocation as a component of the liberal arts educational focus. Students earn 0.5 credit, for every two full semesters enrolled, by attending six general and six performance events for total of 12 events. Two convo credits are required to graduate.

Convocation has been the focus of debate among the faculty members and students. At this time, the convocation requirement is being examined and may be restructured.

Dr. Mary Beth Bagg, Modern Languages, served as convocation director, her second year, offering options such as field trips to the Eiteljorg Museum. A great deal of student input, thanks to surveys of the student body on what they would like to see or hear, was used. Even a Black Sect Tantric Buddhist spoke about the I-Ching and an individual's Ch'i.

Christel Palace opens with a gala

Standing outside the west entry doors to the magnificent new Christel DeHaan Fine Arts Center, one could tell they had really rolled out the red carpet for the black-tie opening gala. (There wasn't actually any red carpet, but there were three red all-weather rugs in front of the doors and no one had wiped their feet on them yet.)

As I observed the remnants of yesterday's snow-fall melting in the late evening sun, it occurred to me that despite the spell of bad weather and some minor problems with putting the finishing touches on the new $10.2 million building, things had come together right on time.

"I guess they survived," said a woman waiting for her husband to finish his discussion with the valet parking attendants.

"Yes," I said. I was sure it had been a very stressful week for those in charge of making everything perfect for the evening.

"The pansies, I mean," the woman said, referring to the yellow potted flowers by the entrance that were apparently unharmed by Wednesday's snow.

"Yes," I said again. This was to be the climax of months, years, of hard work for many involved.

For the occasion, everything was top-class, beginning with the valet parking attendants, who collected guests' cars at the circular drive in front of the building and dropped them off in the old Marsh parking lot. Meanwhile, for some reason, about a third of the parking spaces behind the library had been roped off, making it are usually more brightly colored while female animals are of a duller color because they have to protect their young or something. At the opening gala, women wore wide varieties of outfits in many brilliant colors and mingled with tuxedoed penguins.

Some of the decor at the celebration would create culture shock for the average college student. In the center of the art gallery was a monstrous, circular table magnificently piled with foods such as melons, asparagus, carrots and other things no college student would admit to eating. Servers wandered through the crowd offering hors d'oeuvres. I heard a student remark that he was not about to eat something he couldn't pronounce. Even the beverages had fussy names like "LaCroix" and "Casadia." The one drink I knew for sure how to pronounce, "Koala," didn't seem like such a good idea, since it was named after an animal that hardly ever drinks.

The students there must have looked a little out of place to other guests. Once

I was asked if I was conducting tours and someone else showed me his ticket and asked me to show him the "left parterre." The what? I had been confused with students who were giving tours of the 59,000 square-foot building and seating guests in the difficult for students coming to evening classes to find parking spaces.

The inside of the fine arts center was the dictionary definition of "gala." Hundreds of elegantly dressed guests filled the lobby and art gallery. In the animal kingdom, male animals 500-seat performance hall.

Students had important roles in making the opening a success. One student helper even repaired a button that had popped off the jacket of someone that was supposed to speak at the ceremony in the performance hall. Overall, students were treated kindly and with respect by those in attendance and President Lantz personally thanked them for coming.

The faculty and administration were well-represented at the celebration as well. Exhibited in the art gallery were works by familiar names like Dee E. Schaad, Gerald Boyce, Ed Manetta and Earl Snellenberger. On the tour, guests would see rooms that had been donated by Mr. and Mrs. William Bright, Dr. Mary Busch, Drs. Edwin and Jo Ann Domb, Dr. I. Lynd Esch, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Fisher, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Kendall Hottell, Dr. and Mrs. David Huffman, Dr. and Mrs. George Keenan, Peter and Rebecca Wright Noot, Mr. and Mrs. David Sease, Gene E. Sease, and David Wantz and Susan Fleck Wantz. The next day I heard other faculty members express disappointment that it wasn't possible to have closets, or possibly latrines, named after them for somewhat smaller donations.

Being at such a formal event isn't always easy, even for those with experience. "It's hard to eat and drink and stand," said a woman trying hard to do all three and be merry at the same time.

"You can really tell who is used to wearing a tuxedo and who is not," I was informed, "because those who are used to it know the secret to keeping their shirts tucked in."

"The Christel DeHaan Fine Arts Center is a vibrant part of a vibrant university in a vibrant town."

—Mayor Stephen Goldsmith

"What is the secret," I asked.

"You tuck it into the front of your underwear," they said, "and pull the ends out of the leg holes."

Oh.

I was able to sneak a peek at the Ruth Lilly Performance Hall, before it filled with guests for the opening ceremony and inaugural concert. As I stood there in the empty hall I marveled at the magnificence of it all. I realized that U of I finally had something to really be proud of. Like President Lantz said, it was something we had been waiting for a long, long time. "I'm just happy to be here when we brought it all to fruition," Lantz said.

Seeing it brought to fruition made me a believer of the propaganda I'd been hearing about, like how, for its size, it had no rival in the Midwest—and I hadn't even heard the acoustics yet. It looked like a modern rendition of one of the fabulous old movie palaces. As Raymond Leppard, music director of the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra and U of I's artist in residence would say later that evening, the performance hall will soon come to be known as the "Christel Palace."

At the ceremony, Mayor Stephen Goldsmith thanked President Lantz, Christel DeHaan, Ruth Lilly and others who were responsible for the fine arts center, which he said would be another important part of fine arts and culture in Indianapolis: a vibrant part of a vibrant university in a vibrant town.

President Lantz, on behalf of the university, extended thanks and appreciation to Christel DeHaan for her $3.5 million donation for the construction of the fine arts center. She emphasized her love for the arts, as well as the students and community the building would serve. That love, she said, is best expressed in the new fine arts center that she helped to create. She also returned the thanks to Lantz and others who had the vision to want to create the fine arts center. DeHaan said Lantz once told her he wanted "a place where the arts could not just be done, but celebrated."

At the performance by the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, I got to hear what I couldn't see earlier. The sound during the approximately 90-minute performance that included music by Bach, Mozart, Holst and Boccherini was incredible. As the concert began, the motorized acoustic drapes raised to increase reverberation during the performance. The sounds of the orchestra were enhanced by the 28-inch thick walls and special reflecting chandeliers that enable musicians to better perform with proper balance and intonation. The hall was designed around the center of the stage and every detail, down to the thickness of seat cushions, is intended to maximize acoustical performance. As magnificent as the performance hall are the nine-foot grand pianos to be housed here: a rear Hamburg Steinway and a Bosendorfer.

Perhaps the greatest thing about the Christel DeHaan Fine Arts center could not be heard or seen that night. The opening gala demonstrated one of the greatest gifts the new building will bring to campus life—increased interaction with the community that will come from events like this and others.

Residence Assistants — Helping Hands

Several students are selected each year to serve as residence assistants in each of the four dorms. These students carry a great deal of responsibility in addition to their course loads.

They serve as peer counselors to the students in their respective residence halls while receiving credit towards residence hall room charges.

To apply for the job of being a residence assistant the student must complete a special application form, which is available in the Office of Student Life.

Residence assistants are selected each year on the basis of the application, recommendations from faculty and staff members and interviews conducted by a staff committee.

The Residence Assistants return to campus before the students do to prepare the dorms for their arrival. Many residence assistants decorate their assigned floors and make name signs for the residents' doors.

On move-in day the residents assistants are on hand to pass out room keys and information packets to students. They also aid with moving in to the dorms and answering any questions the students or parents might have.

RHA — Leads the way

The Residence Hall Association (RHA) is an organized body whose members are elected by and represent the resident students. The goals of RHA include maintaining and striving to improve the quality of life in the residence halls, promoting activities between residence halls and also between resident students and commuter students at U of I.

RHA had a busy year. They assembled the new student directory and the datebook calendar. They also sponsored a mid-term snack break for all students and the annual spring formal. In addition to all this they addressed several issues in the residence hall system.

ISG—Tomorrow's leaders

The Indianapolis Student Government is elected by students to serve the student body. Throughout the course of the year they plan several activities for students.

These included the annual Brown County Day, the winter formal, Mardi Gras and Cyclorama.

ISG membership gives students a chance to perfect their leadership skills. Students learn a great deal about event planning and preparation as well as teamwork.

Fellowship of Christian Athletes—Disciples

Ruth Lilly Center's Multi-Purpose Room and Dance Studio were packed every Thursday evening with the many members of Fellowship of Christian Athletes. FCA is an organization that seeks to serve God through participation in sporting events and other activities, but one does not need to be an athlete to belong. FCA is made up of many different members of the U of I community.

The meetings always promoted fellowship with Christ and all that He does for us. The meetings and fellowship also gave students support when problems pulled them down. FCA also had retreats and took part in activities around school.

Christian Life Committee raises awareness

The Christian Life Committee of ISG is one of the most active groups on the U of I campus. The group promoted Christian awareness to students in many ways. It began at the start of the year with Labor Day Lift-off. Members hosted students from Purdue and Ball State University for a day of fellowship and fun. At the end of the day, Christian music duo Heartsounds performed. The pair spreads its music of Christianity through original music compositions.

The group also took a fall and a spring weekend retreat. They took their fall retreat at Pine Creek Camp and their spring retreat at Rivervale.

The Christian Life Committee also coordinated a midweek worship service each Wednesday evening. This showcased the talent of student performers as they worshiped the Lord.

Over spring break eleven students from U of I joined 64 other students from six campuses to work in Juarez, Mexico. The Break For The Border team was from U of I, the Wesley Foundations at Ball State and Purdue, Marian College, the Newman Center at Indiana University Northwest and Park Place UMC Campus Ministry of Anderson, Indiana.

The students worked on five homes to replace makeshift shacks, helped pour a patio for a refugee shelter and helped build an infirmary for residents in a nursing home.

To round out the year the Christian

Contemporary Christian rockers, PFR (Pray For Rain), played U of I's Ransburg Auditorium in April. They brought a Christian message to students through thought-provoking rock songs.

Communications-On the Edge

The Communications Department is housed in former men's dormitory Buxton Hall. The department includes several student groups.

These include The Student/Reflector and Oracle, the newspaper and yearbook of U of I. The Student/Reflector, published weekly, staffed by students and advised by Professor Terri Johnson, won many awards in the Indiana Collegiate Press Association competition, competing with newspapers of similar size. The Oracle also won several awards in state competition.

WICR, the radio voice of U of I, located at 88.7 on the FM dial, is an eclectic mix of music and public affairs programming. The afternoon student programming is a mix of traditional and contemporary jazz music. The station went all jazz in November, and the format has been very successful. U of I football, basketball and baseball games were also broadcast over WICR. The station General Manager is Ed Roehling.

Dr. Gobetz shows off the department's youngest member, his son William.

U of I students were given an opportunity to gain hands-on experience in television production through applied TV class. The students were involved in the production and editing of a communications department video. The group was lead by Dr. Rob Gobetz.

The Speech Team had another successful season. The team competed at Nationals competition at Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green. Julie Brinson competed in prose, two dramatic duos and poetry; Dan Strunk, in prose, two dramatic duos and poetry; Candace Wells, in prose, poetry and informative; Mike Sargent, in extemp and informative; Shariq Siddiqui, in

Earth Space Science Club—Outrageous

The Earth Space Science Club had a busy year. The main objective of the group was to gain an understanding of physics and earth space sciences and become aware of opportunities to view these in nature. The group took several trips which helped them to do this. They visited the National Weather Service's Doppler Radar at the Indianapolis International Airport in November.

They also took several fun trips. These included a journey to Paramount Music Palace in February. Another fun trip taken during March had a wet and wild twist—the annual canoe trip down the Mighty Sugar Creek. Of the seven members who attended five had their canoes tipped over.

The club was led by President Shane Schmidt and Vice President Eddie Johnson. Secretary was John Rosich. Dr. Tom Chamberlin was the sponsor.

For the second time in eight years the original musical production, One Voice, was preformed at U of I. This musical was written by Dr. Williams and his daughter Kathryn Williams Ransburg.

The dinner theatre revival ran April 15, 16 and 17 in Schwitzer Center's Ober dining Hall. The buffet dinner began each evening at 6:30 p.m., followed by performances at 8 p.m.

The captivating Biblical drama combines serious thought with humor in a story that begins with the Creation and continues through the resurrection of Jesus and beyond.

Characters such as Adam and Eve, Moses, the Egyptian Pharaoh, Daughter are portrayed against a musical backdrop that includes rock, gospel, country and burlesque.

"The play's intent is to show God's love for mankind and the unlikely people he used to present his message and witness to God's glory," Williams said.

The play had its world premiere on the U of I campus in 1986. Later Williams was invited to perform the work at the Theatre Ten Ten in New York for a three week showcase.

Williams wrote the script and his daughter, Kathryn Williams Ransburg, composed most of the music and lyrics. Other collaborators were Susan Day Hancock, Paul Timothy Jackson, Daniel A. Johnson and Michael F. Schoppenhorst. Sue Ellen Conway provided additional music and lyrics.

James W. Ream serves as technical and designer. He recreated the set he did for the New York production. Steve Enzinger, U of I voice instructor, is musical director. James Cramer of the Indianapolis Ballet is choreographer.

Dr. Williams—A quarter century of service

Dr. Richard Williams retired after 26 years of service at U of I. Williams headed the theatre department.

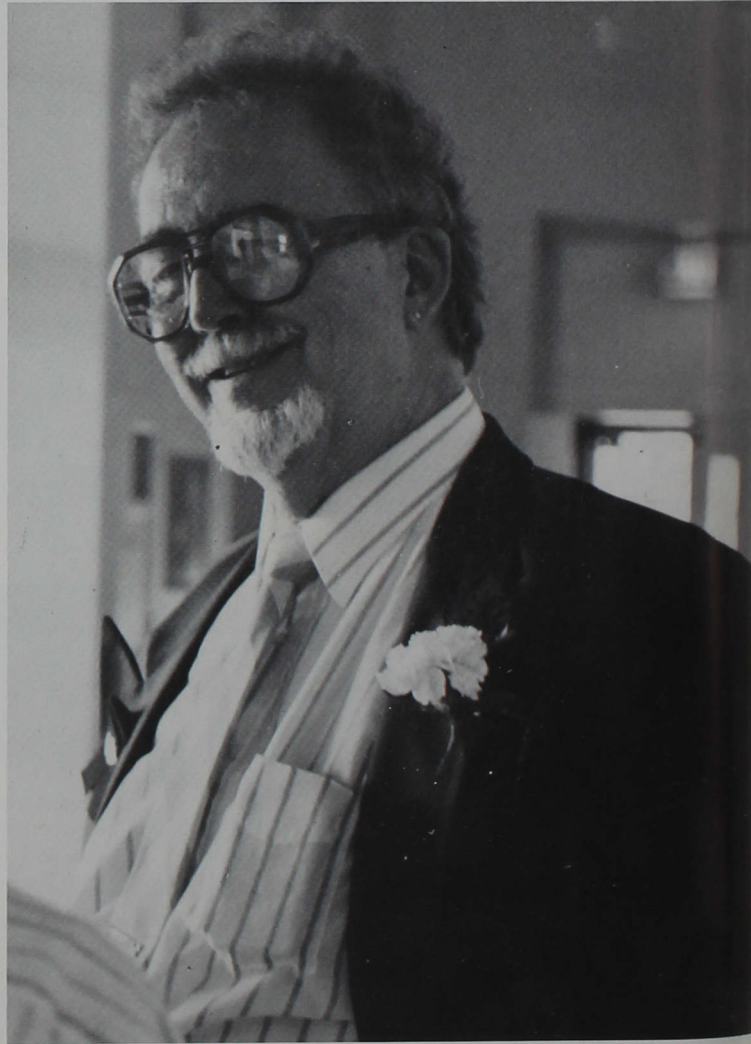

When he joined the faculty, the department was a combination of speech and theatre. Then, only one theatre course was offered and the department did two productions per year. Now a full theatre curriculum and a theatre major are offered and the number of annual productions has doubled.

Dr. Williams was appointed speech and theatre department chairman in 1972. When the departments separated, he continued as theatre chairman.

Williams boasts an impressive resumé of accomplishments with the theatre department. The production of Hamlet, done in his third year at the university, brought Shakespeare back to the Indianapolis stage after a 25 year absence. In addition, the cast traveled to Great Britain to perform.

Williams also developed a "ministry to drama" program. The plays were not always of a religious nature, but many of them were performed in churches. The cast would tour the country to perform. Churches would host potluck dinners for them and they would stay in the homes of church members.

The event that Williams is most proud of in his theatre tenure at the university is having the opportunity to perform One Voice at the Theatre Ten Ten in New York City. The play was written by Williams and some former students. The music was written by his daughter, Kathryn Williams Ransburg. The world premier was on the university campus in 1986. The production was taken to Canada and the east coast. From there, Williams was invited to bring the show to New York for a three week showcase the following year.

Dr. Williams smiles at his retirement party. He was honored for 26 years of service at U of I.

One Voice was revived as Dr. Williams final production at U of I this spring using a replica of the New York set.

Now that he is retired, Dr. Williams hopes to act. He calls acting

"his first love" and says at one time he hoped to act professionally. He also wants to write novels and autobiographical books and possibly a few plays, as well as catch up on his pleasure reading.

Student Nurses Association—Support and service

The Student Nurses Association (SNA) had a prosperous and successful year. The group is open to two or four-year nursing students. It joins together student nurses in an organization and encourages them to support each other as well as offering group support.

The year began with a membership drive. For the first few weeks of school they set up a table in the Schwitzer Center concourse and registered new members. This was a great success as the group recruited more than 150 members.

Among several projects was a "big brothers, big sisters" support group. This allowed the senior members of the group to act as a "big brother or big sister" to the junior members. The older members were available to answer questions and offer help as needed.

The group sponsored a food drive in November. Another project was serving dinner at the Ronald McDonald House. Students volunteered to do so. They served approximately 60 family members.

The SNA sponsored a bean bag game at Mardi Gras. The object was to throw a bean bag through the cut-out heart of a cardboard nurse. Winners received candy for their efforts.

The group did fund raisers to defray the cost of their projects. These included selling pepper mace, book bags and first aid kits

Officers for the group were D. J. Gilley—President, Kari Strohmeyer—Vice President, Tanya Riggs—Secretary, Susan Derloshon—Treasurer and Erika Sullivan—Publicist. Faculty adviser was Debbie Diaz.

1993 Greyhound Football

The Greyhound football team had a difficult 1993 season but celebrated the defeat of in-state rivals Saint Joseph's and Butler. Coach Bill Bless' squad finished the season with a 2-9 mark.

Offensively the 'Hounds were lead by backfield mates, sophomore Phil Shiban and freshman Rick Etienne. Shiban led the team with seven touchdowns while Etienne reached the end zone six times. On the season, Shiban averaged 81 yards a game rushing for the 'Hounds. The 'Hounds used three quarterbacks over the course of the season, but redshirt freshman Matt Knee saw most of the action receiving the snaps. Senior Scott McMurray and junior Craig Thomas led the 'Hounds in receiving.

honors in both volleyball and basketball. Sands was named Great Lakes Valley Conference player of the year for basketball in 1992-93.

Also putting in great efforts for the team was junior Lesly Miller, a leader in hitting percentage. Freshman Jennifer Johnson also played a key role for the team. Junior Susan Trame and junior Aimee Lammert also helped key the volleyballers' season.

After the season, it was announced that former All-GLVC and Greyhound great Paige Balka would replace Stober who would be leaving to work as an assistant coach at Washington State University.

Men's Golf

Although they were a very young team, Coach Ken Partridge's U of I men's golf squad had a successful 1993-94 campaign as they won three tournaments. Despite breaking its conference record by 25 shots, the team fell four strokes short of earning their seventh consecutive title in the GLVC tournament.

Individually, the team was led by sophomore standout Chad Hilderbrand. A medalist of the GLVC, he represented U of I at the NCAA Division II Nationals where he earned All-America honors. At the Tri-State Invitational, Hilderbrand broke the school record with a six-under-par 66.

Men's Tennis team wins 4th straight GLVC conference title

Coach Joe Gentry's men's tennis team had another excellent season becoming only the second U of I team in the 16 year history of the GLVC to win four straight conference titles. The only other team with that accomplishment was the 1987-92 men's golf team. The team finished the season with a record of 11-12 and were 7-1 in the Great Lakes Valley Conference. The outstanding season led to the naming of Gentry as GLVC Coach of the Year for the fourth consecutive year.

Individually the team was led by senior co-captain Perry Mann at #1 singles and #1 doubles with partner Steve Klei, Mann had an overall record on the season of 31-25. The three time letter winner also broke the school record for most singles victories (56), previously held by former Greyhound standout Marc Hamm, from 1990-93. Mann also holds the school record for most doubles victories (48) and total victories (104). Also setting records was junior Jamie Pheifer who set a single season record with 19 singles victories, breaking the record previously held by Mann. Four Greyhounds earned All-GLVC honors by winning their matches at the conference tournament. Freshman Jim Sutlo won the title at #3 singles and paired with senior Jay Koeller to win the title at #3 doubles. Freshman Chris Baker earned the title at #5 singles and junior Stan Wilkison took honors at #6 singles. Klei, Pheifer and Mann all earned runner-up spots at the conference finals to finish out their outstanding seasons. Also with excellent season were juniors Blaine and Shane Steimel, who paired together as a doubles team for an overall record of 11-9 on the season.

Freshman Chris Baker earned All-GLVC honors.

Changes in Coaching Staff

Bill Bright to retire

The athletic program at the University of Indianapolis experienced many changes during the 1993-94 school year. Director of Athletics Bill

Bill Bright

Bright retired at the end of the school year and Dr. David Huffman, who is the University's Dean for Student Affairs, added the role of Athletic Director to his responsibilities.

Bright, a U of I Athletic Hall of Famer, has served as student-athlete, teacher, coach and administrator for the Greyhound athletic program during his 41 years at U of I. He became the Director of Athletics in 1977 after coaching basketball, baseball and cross country.

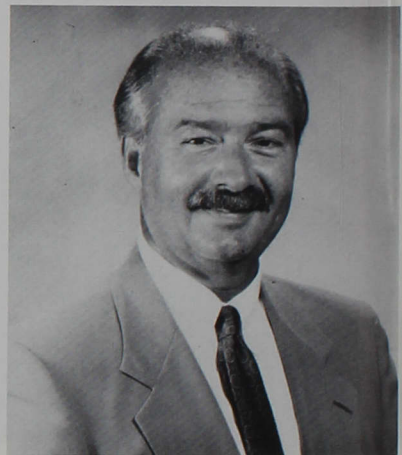

A force in establishing the University of Indianapolis Athletic Hall of Fame, Bright also served on the NCAA II Basketball Committee as chair of the Great Lakes Region committee. In that role, Bright helped select teams for the NCAA Tournament and the Division II top 20.

Bright, who still holds nine school records based on his outstanding baseball pitching, excelled in both baseball and basketball as an undergraduate. In 1952, he was 8-0 with a 1.24 ERA in leading the Greyhounds to a perfect 13-0 season. In 1953, Bright set school records with 10 victories, 10 complete games, 148 strikeouts and  $92\frac{2}{3}$  innings pitched. In his three seasons, Bright finished with Greyhound records for winning percentage (22-3, .880), ERA (1.46) and strikeouts (317). An Amateur Baseball All-American, Bright pitched in the Philadelphia Phillies farm system prior to returning to Indianapolis. In basketball, Bright earned three letters along with second-team All-ICC honors.

While Bright is beginning his bridge to retirement, he will serve as compliance coordinator for NCAA eligibility in the 1994-95 school year and assist Dave Huffman.

Huffman named Athletic Director

David Huffman, who replaces Bright, is a 1964 cum laude graduate of U of I and earned varsity letters in basketball and baseball. He also played on conference championship teams in both sports. As a senior, he played on the Greyhounds' 26-3 basketball team.

He has been Dean of Student Affairs at U of I for 16 years and oversees Admissions, Student Life, Career Services, Chaplain, Cooperative Education, Health Service (medical and counseling), Safety and Police Services, and Student Development and Retention Services. Prior to that, he was in the University Admissions office, from 1970-84, as Director of Admissions.

Huffman earned a master's degree in counseling and guidance from Butler in 1969, and his Ed.D. from Indiana University in administration of higher education in 1978.

Coach Mark Peterson

Mark Peterson moves on

Coach Mark Peterson, after five seasons and a .478 record (99-108), stepped down as university baseball coach. Peterson noted that 16 of the losses were to Division I schools. Purdue and Indiana were both beaten on their home fields by U of I baseball teams.

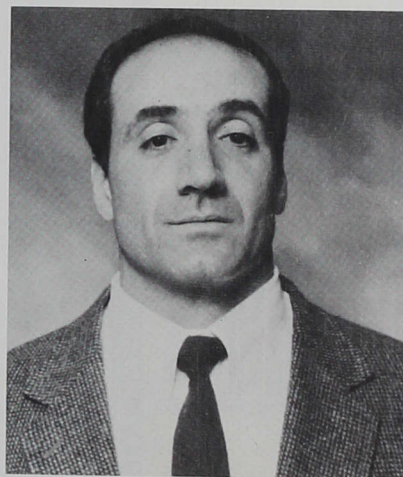

For two of Peterson's seasons the teams were nationally ranked among the top 25 in the country. Pitcher Jeff Montfort this year led the nation in strikeouts and received an NCAA award for this feat. Jeff, a senior, is just one of several outstanding players coached by Peterson.

Bill Bless to teach

Football coach Bill Bless stepped down following 22 seasons as a coach here. Bless coached Indianapolis to a 114-99-9 record. Bless will continue teaching courses at U of I.

Coach Bill Bless

Coach Joe Polizzi

Polizzi named football coach

Joe Polizzi, an assistant coach at Hillsdale College, Michigan, was selected the 13th head coach in the 70 years of Greyhound football.

Polizzi came to U of I after a seven year stint at Hillsdale, his alma mater. A former Hillsdale player, he coordinated the Charger offense and offensive line the past two seasons and served as defensive backfield coach from 1987-91.

Polizzi has also been the Charger's baseball coach. A native of Monroe, Michigan, Polizzi also have coached at Ferris State, 1986-87, and at Ball State, from 1984-85.

Linebacker Polizzi has a B.A. from Hillsdale in Communications Arts and Sciences and a master's in the same field from Western Michigan.

Lisa Precourt named Esch Scholar

U of I senior Lisa Precourt was awarded the prestigious Esch Scholarship for the 1993-94 school year. The award was presented during the first semester opening convocation.

President Lantz said of the award, "It epitomizes the highest we can expect from this university." Every year the award goes to a senior who academically and socially goes above the call expected of a student. The award is named after former U of I President I. Lynd Esch.

Precourt is a Spanish education major, with a minor in history education. At the time the award was presented she maintained a 4.028 GPA. Regarding the high grade point average and hard work she puts in, Precourt says she just does her best, "and lets the chips fall where they may."

Precourt, a member of the U of I tennis team since 1990, was the team captain for the 1993 season. She also served as a residence assistant in Cravens Hall for three years. She was also a member of many organizations, including Alpha Chi, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, the Intercultural Association, the Teachers Education Committee and served as vice president of Iota

Omega, language honor society, for 1993.

Precourt has also received many additional awards. She has been named a Presidential Scholar, the Parker P. Jordan Scholar Athlete for 1991-92, the Outstanding Residential Assistant for 1992-93. She has also received the Meier Award for Excellence in Spanish and the Roy V. Davis Award for geography.

Precourt, originally a business major, tells that she became interested in pursuing a Spanish major after spending two weeks in Latin America. After declaring a Spanish major she spent seven weeks last summer taking courses at a university in Mexico City. After graduation she would like to spend a year in Latin America teaching children, giving her a chance to experience the language.

Precourt likes to use her language skills abroad because she enjoys "communicating with people in their language." She then hopes to use her experiences in a classroom upon her return to the United States.

The End!

Well, the Oracle bricks are all in place! It seemed like light years away, but we finally made it!

A million thank you's are in order. I would like to start by thanking Terri and John Johnson for all of their help and their endless hours of patience in completing this yearbook. Thanks also to the staff, especially Erick Trueblood and Brant Douglas, for seeing this thing through to the very end.

Thanks to Joe Gentry, the athletic department and coaches for all the photos, copy, artwork and help. Thank you to Academic Services, Admissions and Student Life for their aid in identifying thousands of faces. Thank you especially to Greg Smith, Steve Parsell, Lisa McNutt and Karen Gingerich for all of their help.

A special thank you to Jim Ream and Doc Williams for all the theatre photos and info. Thanks to Tom Padgett for developing and printing photos for us. Thanks also to Lance Baker and everyone at Taylor Publishing. Thanks to everyone who designed layouts, wrote copy, took pictures or contributed to this book in any way.

Last but certainly not least thanks to God for carrying me and my staff through this project. We could not have done it alone; that's for sure!

Mary
